mire will, on the present anniversary, lose none of its attractiveness. The two-year old contest will be especially interesting from throwing in the light on the quality of candidates for future honours, and those between the three-year olds, from being almost the last public trial before the contest for the northern "blue ribbon" takes place, will form an unusually attractive feature of the meeting, more particularly if Blair Athol and General Feel meet, which, we understand, is now almost certain. The Curp, the Ebor Handlesp, the Creat Yorkshire Stakes, are also after parts of the kingdom will contribute their quotation of the entries of the state of the sta

NOTES ON PAST RACING.

THE RACLIFFE MEETING was well supported with public money, not so with torses, notwithstanding the liberality and the vigorous and well directed efforts of the "powers that be" to make it attractive, by the reaction of a "spie and span" new grand stard, and improvements to the course, which render it superior to the majority of trysting grounds. The public performed their part in the drama—the attendance being numerous, and with larger fields we should have had to chronicle a successful meeting. For some of the mees there was guttailed or withdrawn—such was the dearl our regular report; and the most not-constitute that were the fluctuations in the betting on the Ebor Mandiesp, which are elsewhere recorded. The Euran Meering was concluded in a manner by no means som reprosel, in so far as clearing the course was concerned. Dressing a countryman in uniform does not constitute him an efficient policeman, but as the committee vivere unable to obtain assistance from London this mast be passed over as a matter for regret rather than the successful meeting of a stewards stand and temporary an indication that Mr. Verral's suggestions were stude would have stood still. They refused to adopt his messed the meeting, when away, for it is pretty clear if he had not suggestions were those would have stood still. They refused to adopt his messed meeting in the meeting, when a way, for it is pretty clear if he had not suggestions were those would have stood still. FISHING.

Wiffing-fishing.—The present season has proved one of the most favourable for this kind of sport that has occurred for many years past, the weather having for the most part been calm and tranquil. Off the Islaed Wighthe whiting grounds have been visited recently by prodigious shoals of these fish, which seize the bait that is presented to them most greedily. Small parties from Southampton, Ryde, Cowes, and Newport may be seen daily in pleasure-boats anchored off the coast of the Wight, following up their recreation, with much success during the indux of the tide.

A STRANGE FISH.—All day a strange fish has been, on exhibition in front of M'Donald's saloon, on the corner of Leidesdorf and Claystreets. It is apparently of the eel species, although it has a head like that of a coddish. The jaws are uncommonnly strong, and garnished, both on the upper and lower, with five large, bony teeth, a quarter of an inch long, which interfock when the mouth is shut. The creature is about four feet long; the head, which is the largest part, is about three indees broad and one inch thick; the body tapering to a point. Instead of the usual round, the body is more of an oval shape, the backbeing ornamented with a broad fin, which runs the entire length; of the body, while there are two broad belly-fine just back of the thread colour of the first hat the fish is a rate one, and that it was taken by some failian ishermen at sea, near the Farallones. season seems determined to maintain his position, and some of his hits have been made with such force and judgment as to call on several occasions special remark from the reportor. We may mention the monster hit at Lord's which was driven through the gates right into the public road—a clean hit for which seven runs were placed to his account. Would space permit we could instance several others, but enough has been said to justly proclaim William Mortlock A1 among our cricket professionals.

THEATRICAL AND MUSICAL

METROPOLITAN.

WETROPOLITAN.

Wern the atmosphere almost at a fever heat, and the green fields and beautiful flowers inviting the denizens of "Coctayno" to taste awhile of Nature's charms it is truly surprising that the metropolitan theatres have been able to keep open at all; but though the "supplemental season" at Her Majesty's has been brought to a close, and the queens of song, like butterflies, have taken their flight to summer climes where "caseades cool and gentle breezes blow," we have still some few warblers left, and Mr. Alfred Mellon, if he drew his conclusion from the appearance of his own concerts might assert that London was as theatrically mad now as ever. Whether it be a general night, or a "classical" might, those seems no diminution in the numbers of the state of the stat hittle to compilate of.

NEW ADELPUI THEATHE.—The revival of "Masks and Faces" at this house has placed an intellectual and emotional treat of the highest order within the reach of every Lioudon playgoer. No more thoroughly delightful councily has been produced in our time, and even among the pieces of the old reperfoire it has but few rivals. The fourteen years which have elapsed since "Masks and Faces" was first produced at the Haymarket have not shorn the triplet of Mr. Benjamin Webster of one of the artistic beauties which then evoked coordial and universal appreciation, and the same may be said of Mrs. Stirling. In addition to these two old where the same may be said of Mrs. Stirling. In addition to these two old with the evoked coordial and universal appreciation, and the same may be said of Mrs. Stirling. MEYRICK'S SCRATCH ELEVEN v. THE ARGY LLE CLUB. This match was played at Worcester, on Wednesday, August 10, and as the time would not let it be played out, it was decided in favour of the Argylle on the first innings. In handling the "willow," Messra, flat, Frikins, and Meyrick distinguished themselves for the Scratch Eleven, and on the other side the batting of Stinton, Marquis, Pardoo, Stevens and Perks was much admired. The bowling of Edgcombe was very good, but that of Tait and Newman was very time and true. The fielding on both sides was good. It will be seen from the score that in their second innings the Scratch eight had 2'2 to get to win, but the time expired when they had scored 46 for the loss of four Whitehead, c Higgs, b Tait.

TWO MILE CHAMPIONSHIP AND THE LONDON SWIMMING CLUB.

In reference to this match we have received a doctor's certificate from Mr. Mather, in which he is stated to be suffering from severe illness, and unfit to meet his engagement on the 29th, although Mather himself says if he is able to walk on Thursday he will go on with the match and send his deposit. From present appearance, and knowing the above to be correct, we do not think it possible that this match will come off, but there will be an open competition. We are extremely sorry to hear of Mr. Mather's indisposition, for no man has been a greater friend to swimmers and swimming.
